Current Comment

This has been a dry year in California. The past week-end brought considerable joy to agriculturists and stockmen in the form of rain—the heaviest downpour of the season. The late rain inflicted a certain amount of damage, but it is believed that the benefits will more than offset the ill effects of the shower. And while California is in comparatively good shape, the neighboring state of Nevada faces almost complete crop devestation unless they get rain, and that quickly. Nevada ranchers are seeking permission to pump four or five inches of water from Lake Tahoe, and while they find some property owners willing enough to give their consent, the majority, it is reported, refuse to see the light. If a few inches of Tahoe water will save the day in Nevada, Californians certainly should co-operate to that extent, regardless. It is difficult to see where the loss of a few inches of water will spoil the beauty of Tahoe, and that is the ground on which many property owners are basing their refusal.

At the western entrance to Pasadena a bridge spans Arroyo Seco. It is a long way to the bottom, and from this bridge 35 persons have leaped to their deaths. It seems to us that a good stout net swung under the structure might frustrate some of these citizens who are tired of living. On the other hand, it might be smart to leave well enough alone, because those who are set on exterminating themselves from an altitude would probably leap off a downtown office building, in the absence of the bridge, with the ever present danger of hurting the well known innocent bystander.

Hand in hand with news of the business depression come reports that indicate a wholesale migration to California resorts this summer. Business may be bad and money may be tight, but your true Californian always finds a way to enjoy some kind of a vacation—which is as it should be.

Civil employees in Poland are forced to exist on eight dollars a week, the result of a recent 15 per cent reduction of wages. Before the cut they were just able to live on their pay. No decrease in the cost of commodities accompanied the reduction, so the future does not look very bright to the servants of the government. There are wealthy men in the United States who believe the American worker should be forced to accept less money, with a consequent lowering of living standards.

Fortunately, most men of means and controllers of the nation's industries, realize that a solution to the existing business depression lies not in that direction. Big producers know too well that their market is not with the wealthy few, but rather with the working people. And right here is where we explode the "overproduction" theory to our own complete satisfaction: Prosperity depends upon the working man's ability to buy; if he's not working, it stands to reason that he cannot buy; he is just as eager to buy now as he ever was, and when the men in whose hands rests the control of industry figure that out for themselves we'll find that the depression is a thing of the past. Just a bad dream that won't recur as long as America tends to her knitting and lets the market take care of itself.

That's all.

Police-Fire Signal Held Up; Fire Lads Don't Like The Idea

The police committee of the local Chamber of Commerce met Friday with members of the Campbell Volunteer Fire company in an endeavor to complete plans for the installation of a joint police and fire signal. The plan met considerable opposition from the fire department, according to Chairman Shadle of the Chamber of Commerce, who declared that steps will be taken at the next meeting of the organization to install a signal light independent of the fire company.

Suggestions to enlarge the fire district were also met with ill favor on the part of the volunteers.

Local Baseball Club Quits; No Support

The excellent Campbell ball team, under the management of Antone Ferro, has disbanded for lack of support. Good crowds were the rule at Sunday games, but very little money was contributed when the hat was passed at the close of the game.

The Campbell aggregation took on any team that wanted a game, and beat practically all of them, after being chiseled out of the local league. It is the hope of Ferro and his boys that at the beginning of next season an equally good team can be organized.

Local Seascouts' Float Wins First Prize In Parade

The Campbell Seascouts have again brought honor and recognition to themselves and to their community. This time it was the result of their entry in the 1931 Fiesta de las Roses parade of a float constructed along the lines of an old Viking boat.

It was complete—from the bow shaped to represent a bird's head, to the shields along the sides which were used for protection in time of attack. The sail was striped with different colored flowers, similar to the type of sail used by the sturdy old Vikings.

The construction and entry of the float was under the personal direction of Lloyd Brown, chief yeoman. He had as his helping committee Elmer Sundquist, Henry Ruthnick and Al Beers. Every one in the Seascout troop contributed toward the construction of the float. The work was done in the evenings during the two weeks preceding the parade.

The float received first prize in its division and excited much favorable comment along the entire line of march. Much credit is due the group of boys who undertook this difficult task and carried it through in competition with organizations which had at their command more facilities and funds.

Marching beside the float were Skipper Worthin Grattan, Quartermasters Miles Standish and Henry Ruthnick, Apprentice Oscar Hait, Ordinary Seascout Norman McVea, and driving the float were Quartermaster Noel Voge and Boatswain's Mate William Halle.

C. Bailey of Sunnyvale will open the Campbell picture house Saturday with an afternoon and evening show. Mr. Bailey's brother will assist him.

CAMPBELL LADIES ENTERTAINED AT L. T. LENOX HOME

"Sunny Ridge," the beautiful home of Mrs. Lionel T. Lenox at Vasona Heights was the scene of a lovely bridge luncheon Wednesday when Mrs. Lenox and her mother, Mrs. W. H. Jackson, entertained a group of friends.

Luncheon was served in the dining room at one large table and in the living room where several small tables had been placed. Pastel cloths of organdie covered the tables and tall silver vases holding sweet peas in similar colors enhanced their beauty. Dainty corsages of sweet peas in lace frills, with silver ribbon loopa were at each plate. The new yellow peas elicited many compliments.

Transvaal daises and gladiolas in peach shades, the latter combined with delphiniums formed the large bouquets that adorned the rooms.

Following luncheon the guests enjoyed the lovely lawns and terrace gardens, returning to the house for several games of bridge.

Those bidden to share the pleasure of the afternoon, which was one of a series being given at the Lenox home, were Mesdames Ralph Hyde, Lloyd Shank, Vernon Perrott, Gordon Ainsley, J. C. Ainsley, William Lloyd, George Robson, Herold Morton, Roy Archibald, Harry Smith, Calvin Bohnett, Herbert Shadle, Walter Stray, R. Y. Maxon, C. T. Tanner, D. H. Cramer, Russell Kennedy, Guy Farley, Ira Abbott, Hattie Baugh, Leigh Saunders, Robert Shearer, Merlin Bohnett; Miss Mary Rodeck and Miss Ann Hagelin, all of Campbell; Mrs. Warren Shelley of Ben Lomond; Mrs. Emily Gard and Mrs. Elroy Shank of San Jose.

Officer Harry Evans took into custody yesterday two youths who were batting about town on a motorcycle which was devoid of license plates and muffler. He refered them to Jack Pacheco.

Litvinov, Soviet Commissar, Baits Europe's Statesmen at Geneva—Secretary Doak Denounces Suggested Wage Reduction.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

M. Litvinov

SOVIET RUSsia, as personified by Maxim Litvinov, its commissar of foreign affairs, had the time of its young life at Geneva where the international commission of inquiry into Briand's European union project was sitting. Litvinov astounded Arthur Henderson, Briand, Dino Grandi and the rest of the commissioners by the calm statement that their "capitalistic" governments were ruining themselves and the rest of the world by selling goods dear at home and cheap abroad—in other words, by dumping. And he then with equal calmness denied flatly that the Soviet government had been guilty of this pernicious practice, though generally accused of it. Russia, he asserted, had done just a little friendly exporting.

"It is perfectly obvious that low prices cannot be regarded as indicating dumping," he declared. "If however, by dumping is understood a policy of high monopolist prices in the home markets and cut prices for export, it will be found precisely that it is the capitalistic countries which are guilty in this respect."

The Soviets, continued the commissar, are eager to help in bringing to an end the present economic depression, and on their behalf he offered two suggestions for the consideration of the commission. The first of these was that the European powers adopt a convention pledging themselves to compulsory sale in the home markets at prices no higher than on foreign markets. The Soviets, Litvinov said, would sign such a convention. He asserted that it would raise the buying power of the masses and help them absorb overproduction.

His second proposal was this: In order to remove the atmosphere of mistrust and jealousy that has been aggravating the crisis, all nations should sign a pact of "economic non-aggression" along the same lines as the Kellogg pact outlawing war. The draft of a protocol of such a pact was submitted to the delegates. It called for a general customs truce, among other things.

In the first sessions of the commission the question of the proposed Austro-German customs accord was brought up, and the pact was vigorously and skillfully defended by Dr. Julius Curtius, German foreign minister, and Johann Schober, Austrian vice chancellor. The British and French insisted that the accord should be submitted to the World court for an opinion as to whether it violated the post-war treaties, and the council of the League of Nations ordered this done. The council has selected Arthur Henderson as chairman of the 1932 disarmament conference.

THERE has been of late much discussion as to whether conditions in the United States justified a general cut in wages, and what the effect of such a move would be. Secretary of Labor Doak took a hand in the debate with a statement to the effect that any move on the part of industry to lower wages would be considered a violation of confidence by the administration because of the agreement to maintain wage scales which President Hoover obtained from the industrial leaders late in 1929. In the event of wage reductions, he declared, organized labor would be justified in demanding higher pay and in opposing the move by strikes.

Mr. Doak added that so far as he knew, no leader of industry has proposed a reduction in wages. Such suggestions, he said, have come from bankers, and are based on the opinion that workers' pay should be lowered to conform to the low price levels which have resulted from the depression. He attributed the current controversies between workers and employers to the expiration of agreements, and added that in nearly every case the difficulties have been amicably settled. Six impending strikes, which were brought to the attention of the Labor department the previous week, were averted by the department's conciliation service, and in every case a return to the existing wage scale was effected.

S. R. McKelvie

IN LONDON the world grain conference was trying to find the remedy for the crisis in the agricultural world brought on by the immense overproduction of wheat. Samuel R. McKelvie, member of the American farm board, told the delegates the first thing was to slash acreage to consumption needs, and submitted the results of a study of the situation of increasing surpluses and falling prices. Speaking from the American standpoint, he said: "We see no possibility of a satisfactory solution of the world wheat problem which does not include, as the most important single element, curtailment of production in exporting countries, individually and as a whole, until a better adjustment between supply and disposition can be effected, and restraint upon fresh expansion of production thereafter."

As a material aid toward relieving overburdened markets McKelvie urged every possible means of consumption expansion and suggested abolition by European importing countries of their protective tariffs, milling regulations and preferential prices for domestic wheat.

WHEN the directors of the World Bank for International Settlements met in Basel, Switzerland, they heard from Gates W. McGarrah, its president, that the deposits of the institution have gone past the $400,000,000 mark. This sum is far in excess of the expectations, and it clearly shows, according to the belief there, that the world bank is becoming something more than a mere depository for the central banks of various nations, so that even if the reparations payments should later be put on some other basis, or cease entirely, the bank would still be certain to continue to function.

The bank has consented to help in putting the Austrian bank, Creditanstalt, back on its feet but it was decided that the initiative must come from the League of Nations committee for control of Austrian loans.

AS WAS predicted, the War department has decided to abandon wholly or in part 53 surplus forts, camps and reservations. In the list announced by Secretary Hurley are Fort Lincoln, N. D.; Fort Missoula, Mont.; Fort Eustis, Va.; Fort D. A. Russell, Texas; Fort Brown, Texas; Fort Hunt, Va.; Camp Stephen D. Little, Ariz.; Camp Garry J. Jones, Ariz.; Miller Field, N. Y., and Chanute Field, Ill. Of course the abandonment of these posts may be prevented by indignant congressmen.

General MacArthur

HOW the American army is to be reorganized, developed and modernized was described in an announcement by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff. The plans set forth include extension of mechanization and motorization throughout the army, the revamping of the cavalry arm by the substitution of fighting machines for horses, and the development of powerful tank forces to be attached to army corps or field armies, rather than the infantry, which remains the basic arm.

Some cavalry units with horses as mounts will be retained for use in rough country, but in general the horse as a war weapon is discarded. The mechanized force at Fort Eustis will be reorganized a reinforced cavalry regiment. Combat cars, equipped with machine guns and possibly heavier weapons, which can travel 70 miles an hour on hard roads, are counted on to give the cavalry high mobility.

Despite the more extensive use of machines, the infantry will remain the backbone of the army according to General MacArthur's program. In his opinion the infantry's ability and power to fulfill its mission of closing with the enemy make it "the decisive arm."

HOOVER dam across Boulder canyon of the Colorado river is within the law and work on the huge project can go ahead. So ruled the Supreme court of the United States in deciding that the act of congress authorizing the construction was constitutional and dismissing the bill of complaint of the state of Arizona. The court, however, declared that Arizona had shown that it might be injured by the distribution of water from the reservoir to be created and that it therefore has the right to make further appeals for relief should its rights be impaired.

In another case, that of Yetta Stromberg, youthful Communist, the Supreme court held invalid that clause of California's "red flag" law which makes it a felony to "display any red flag or other device in any public place or from any building as a sign, symbal or emblem of opposition to organized government or as an invitation or stimulus to anarchistic action, or as an aid to propaganda that is of a seditious character." The finding declared this clause was "repugnant to the guarantee of liberty contained in the Fourteenth amend."

CELEBRATING the fiftieth anniversary of its birth, the American Red Cross staged on May 21 what it called "the world's greatest dinner party." Every one of its 3,500 chapters held an anniversary dinner in its community, and all of them were connected up by radio with the main dinner in Washington. At this feast President Hoover, who is also president of the Red Cross, was the principal speaker; and the guest of honor was Judge Max Huber of Geneva, Switzerland, president of the international committee of the Red Cross. With them sat cabinet officers and their wives and many other notabilities.

The Post Office department issued a special commemoration stamp on the anniversary date.

DEATHS of two Americans attracted considerable attention. In Tours, France, Brig. Gen. Robert H. Dunlap, a distinguished officer of the marine corps, was killed by a landslide in a heroic effort to save the life of a woman. Ralph Barton, famous cartoonist and illustrator, committed suicide in his New York apartment, leaving a note that said he feared he was going insane.

Cardinal Segura

POPE PIUS XI, addressing a group of Spanish pilgrims, described the burning of churches and other religious edifices in Spain as "sacrileges against God and holy religion," and added: "While I recognize the abnormal situation in Spain, it cannot justify the outrageous deeds carried out by the enemies of God that were not suppressed by the authorities."

The Vatican, however, is promoting a policy of conciliation and the papal nuncio, Tedeschini, has had friendly consultation with Minister of Justice de los Rios who explained the arrest and expulsion of Bishop Mujica of Vitoria. The nuncio has expressed sorrow over what has happened, and it is understood in Madrid that he places much of the blame for the rioting on the attitude of Cardinal Segura, the former primate of Spain, who was forced to leave the country because he would not accept the republic without protest.

Cardinal Segura and Bishop Mujica got together at Lourdes, France, and proceeded to Rome for an indefinite stay. They will probably be told that the Vatican intends to drop the quarrel with the republic.

Alfonso, the former king, celebrated his forty-fifth birthday with a private family luncheon in Fontainebleau. There was no observation of the anniversary in Madrid.

DESPITE the rebellious Cantonese, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek is still the ruler of China, and when the people's convention closed its twelve-day session in Nanking he made an impressive plea for unity and for co-operation with the government in suppressing banditry and communism.

The principal achievements of the convention were the adoption of a new constitution, which goes into effect on June 1, the declaration of the republic of China with its permanent capital at Nanking, and the mandate given the government to carry out the terms of the manifesto declaring all unequal treaties between China and foreign powers null and void.

FOR many months the world has been reading about the first armored cruiser built by the German republic under the limits imposed by the Versailles treaty. It was described as a wonderful vessel of 10,000 tons so powerful that it was called the "vest pocket battleship." Well, it was launched the other day at Kiel in the presence of a huge crowd of officials and citizenry, but the event was marred by a conflict of orders that resulted in the ship's being loosed to slide down the ways before President Hindenburg had a chance to break the bottle of champagne on its bows and christen it Deutschland.

The new ship defies the Washington treaty classification. It is neither a capital ship nor a cruiser but is superior to both. Limited to 10,000 tons, it is much heavier armed than other ships of the same size. It is equipped with six 11-inch guns throwing projectiles weighing 660 pounds. In velocity, which is said to be as much as 26 knots, the new ship is superior to capital ships. The hull of the cruiser is of shallow draft and so minutely compartmented as to make it comparatively safe against torpedoes and mines. The usual heavy turbines have been replaced by Diesel motors, which give a radius of action of over 10,000 miles. The cost of the ship was $20,000,000.

General B. D. Foulois

FLYING men of the United States army had a chance to show what they can do in mass during the week, for the air forces were mobilized in grand maneuvers at Chicago, New York and elsewhere under the direct command of Gen. B. D. Foulois, dean of the fighting air men. The planes, of all types, concentrated at Dayton, Ohio, and on Thursday put on a parade and exhibition at Chicago that was the closing feature of the city's jubilee. Then they descended on the Atlantic coast and displayed their ability to defend the metropolis and Boston from hostile attack. A night bombing raid on New York had been planned, but General MacArthur, chief of staff, vetoed this, asserting that the maneuvers represented a real attempt to test out the defensive power of the air arm rather than the staging of a circus. Nearly seven hundred planes took part in the maneuvers, being gathered from all parts of the country.

World's Biggest "PBX" Serves Banking Group

The skyscraper shown at the right, located in downtown New York, is the headquarters of the City Bank-Farmers Trust Company. Fifty-nine stories tall, it is one of four buildings in Manhattan higher than the famous Woolworth building. On the fifteenth floor is the largest telephone private branch exchange ("P. B. X.") installation in the world, serving this bank and affiliated institutions, which include the National City Bank and National City Company.

Enough telephone central office equipment to care for a city of 50,000 is required for this banking group, interconnecting their headquarters and some 40 branches by means of 220 "tie lines," 430 trunk lines, and a present installation of 2,900 telephones. Calls within the organization are dialed direct, as are local city calls. Out-of-town calls, and all incoming calls, are handled at a manual switchboard. A separate teletypewriter system transmits written messages by wire.

He finds the market for what he grows by using his telephone

A TRUCK gardener 8 miles east of Stockton knows that his vegetables are worth more when they are delivered fresh to the markets that need them.

So he calls all possible markets every morning by Telephone. This prevents unproductive trips, wasted hauling, and spoilage.

This farmer makes more profit from a small farm than many farmers can make on a much larger farm that does not have a telephone.
